Only the GP can refer a person to the NHS Audiology service for a hearing assessment/hearing aids. Patients who are housebound can be referred for home visiting service. Before completing the referral, the GP must check the person's ears are clear for the referral to be accepted.

Private Audiology Clinics

Specsavers, Boots and Amplifon offer free hearing tests and can give a prescription of hearing test results to be passed onto the GP to then refer to the FREE NHS audiology service for free hearing aids if privately paid for hearing aids is not an option.

All the private clinics listed below supply a range of hearing aids at different costs and an after-care service that usually last about four years. All provide equipment that can be purchased privately that are designed to go with fitted hearing aids. All provide free batteries and tubing as part of the aftercare service.

For more information, please refer to websites as the information changes periodically.
